

Assessment Policy

Introduction

We believe that effective assessment provides information to improve teaching and learning. To do this in our school, we undertake two different but complimentary types of assessment: assessment for learning and assessment of learning.

Assessment for learning (formative assessment) involves the use of assessment in the classroom to raise pupil achievement. It is based on the idea that pupils will improve most if they understand the aim of their learning, where they are in relation to this aim, and how they can achieve this aim (i.e. to close the gap in their knowledge). The vast majority of our assessment is formative that involves teachers giving feedback to children that relates to what they have achieved and areas they need to improve on.

Assessment of learning (summative assessment) involves judging pupils performance against Age Related Expectations (ARE). Teachers may make these judgements at the end of a unit of work, of a year, or of a Key Stage and are based upon bodies of the children's work as well as tests. We recognise that, whilst useful, summative tests only provide a snapshot of performance at any given time. Summative assessments are completed across year groups to help ensure that our decisions are always objective and accurate.

We give our children regular feedback on their learning so that they understand what it is that they need to do better. Research has shown that their involvement in the review process raises standards, and that it empowers pupils to take action towards improving their performance.

Aims

The aims of assessment in our school are:

- To enable our children to demonstrate what they know, understand and can do in their work;
- To help our children recognise the standards to aim for, and to understand what they need to do next to improve their work;

- To allow teachers to plan work that accurately reflects the needs of each child;
- Teachers can assess what children know, understand and can apply to their work;
- Identify children exceeding their age related expectations and therefore plan work to extend them further;
- To provide regular information for parents and carers that enables them to support their child's learning;
- To provide the Headteacher and Principal with information that allows them to make judgements about the effectiveness of the school.

Planning for Assessment

We use our school's curriculum plan to guide our teaching. In this plan, we set out the aims, objectives and values of our school, and give details of what is to be taught to each year group. In our school curriculum plan, we also identify opportunities for assessment within each broad unit of work.

To support our teaching, we use The National Literacy Framework and The National Numeracy Framework. We use the assessment guidance in these schemes to help us identify each child's level of attainment.

We plan our lessons with clear learning objectives. We base these upon the teacher's detailed knowledge of each child. We strive to ensure that all tasks are appropriate to each child's ability. Our lesson plans make clear the expected outcomes for each lesson.

Teachers always share the lesson's learning objective with the children as the lesson begins. They also indicate the way in which the activity is linked to the learning objective, and the criteria against which they work will be judged.

Teachers ask well phrased questions and analyse pupil's responses to find out what they know, understand and can do, and to reveal their misconceptions.

We make a note of those individual children who do not achieve at the expected level for the lesson, and we use this information when planning for the next lesson. We also keep this information as a record of the progress made by the class.

Target setting

We in fact set targets in Mathematics and English for all our children, during each academic year. We discuss individual targets where necessary, and communicate these to parents and carers. We review the progress of each child at the end of the academic year, and set revised targets as necessary.

We also set targets for other areas of work in school. We encourage the children to set targets themselves, linked to their individual working habits and teachers review these with each child on a regular basis.

We ask our older children to review their targets with fellow pupils because we believe that this encourages them to work together and share evidence of progress. We encourage the children to involve their parents and carers in this process.

Recording

We recognise various methods of assessing a child's learning. The type of assessment that we make varies from subject to subject. We find it unnecessary to keep a formal record of all these assessments; we record only the information that affects future learning.

On our planning sheets, we record only those pupils who fail to meet the planned learning objective, or who achieve more than was planned, so that we can take the needs of these pupils into account when planning for the next lesson. Where the majority of the class makes the planned progress, there is, of course, no need to record this, and we use our annotated lesson plans as a record of progress measured against learning objectives.

We take the objectives for individual lessons from the broad learning objectives within the school's curriculum plan. These in turn reflect the demands of the National Curriculum. Our teachers record the progress of each child against these broad objectives. This enables them to make a judgement about the work of each child in relation to Age

Related Expectations. National expectation is that pupils should be secure in their Age Related (Year Groups) expectation by the end of the school year. Progress through the expectations is defined as “Emerging, Developing and Secure”. This allows us to monitor the progress of each child. Each teacher passes this information on to the next teacher at the end of each year. Information is also reported to parents through reports and parents evening and will detail if your child is below, at or above the National Age Related Expectations.

Reporting to parents and carers

We have a range of strategies that keep parents and carers fully informed of their child’s progress in school. We encourage parents and carers to contact the school if they have any concerns about any aspect of their child’s work. We are available to talk to parents at the beginning and the end of each day and appointments can be made also.

Twice a year we send out a written report of their child’s progress and achievements during this year. In this report we may also identify target areas for the next school year. We write individual comments on all subjects of the National Curriculum, and on Religious Education.

At the beginning of the school year (usually October) we hold an informal open evening, whereby the parents are welcome to come to their child’s classroom and look at their work and see how they are progressing, whilst also having the opportunity to talk the class teacher.

At the end of the school year (during the summer term), we offer parents and carers the opportunity to meet their child’s class teacher. During this meeting we evaluate their child’s progress as measured against the targets. Parents and carers are also invited to look through their child’s school work and ask any questions they feel they have.

We offer parents and carers of pupils in Reception class the opportunity to discuss their child’s learning profile.

At the start of each new term, each of our teachers gives parents and carers an update that identifies the main areas of study for that particular class. In this update, the teacher identifies how parents and carers can support any elements of the work during the rest of the term.

Feedback to pupils

We believe that feedback to pupils is very important, as it tells them how well they have done, and what they need to do next in order to improve their work. We have an agreed code for marking, as this ensures that we all mark in the same way, and the children learn to understand it.

We give children verbal feedback on their work whenever possible. We usually do this when the children are working during the lesson although we sometimes give feedback on a particular lesson at the beginning of the next one. When lesson time does not allow for verbal feedback, we write comments on the children's work during marking. We give written comments to children of all ages. We do not always aim these comments at the children; quite often we write something that is useful to parents, carers and teachers.

When we give written feedback to a child, we relate this to the learning objectives for the lesson. We make clear whether the objective has been met, and we produce evidence to support our judgement. If we consider that the objective has not been met, we make it clear why we think so. In either case, we identify what the child needs to do in order to produce (even) better work in the future.

Teachers give pupils feedback which confirms they are on the right track, which encourages them to make an improvement. Teachers give pupils suggestions as guidance but they recognise that pupils gain most when they think things through for themselves.

Having children assess their own or each others work can be very effective, because it enables them to clarify their ideas on progressing to the next step, but this must be carefully managed, to avoid unhelpful comparisons. Teachers always mark the work themselves afterwards.

We allow time at the beginning of the lesson for the children to absorb any comments written on their work, to answer any questions written on it by the teacher, and also to ask any questions of their own. There may also be improvements they can work on during this time. We start the lesson in this way in order to ensure that the time our teachers spend on marking really has an impact. We believe that learning is maximised when children enter into a dialogue about their work.

Inclusion and assessment for learning

Our school aims to be an inclusive school. We actively seek to remove barriers to learning and participation that can hinder or exclude individual pupils, or groups of pupils.

We achieve educational inclusion by continually reviewing what we do, by monitoring data, and through asking ourselves questions about the performance of these individuals and groups of pupils. In this way, we make judgements about how successful we are being at prompting racial and gender equality, and including pupils with disabilities or special educational needs.

Monitoring and review

This policy was drawn up, discussed and agreed by members of the Viking School. This policy will be reviewed again in two years time.
